

338 Fishington Road, WONGWIBINDA, NSW 2350

Benchmark New England grazing - scale, reliability & proven performance.

Te Angie Station presents a rare and compelling opportunity to secure a blue-ribbon, large-scale cattle breeding and fattening enterprise in the tightly held Wongwibinda district of New England NSW - a region widely recognised for production reliability, pasture performance and the consistent delivery of premium beef.

Expertly managed and significantly enhanced throughout the current ownership, the property has benefited from extensive pasture development and ongoing fertiliser programs, materially increasing carrying capacity and operational efficiency. With a proven history of running 1,100-1,200 breeding cows, Te Angie offers genuine commercial scale with the confidence of established production.

Infrastructure across the holding is both substantial and thoughtfully integrated to support streamlined, low-stress livestock management at scale. Excellent water security, quality fencing and an efficient laneway system enable ease of operation, while structural improvements are commensurate with a grazing asset of this calibre.

The country is underpinned by productive soft grey loams and trap soils, complemented by basalt caps that further enhance fertility and pasture response. Supported by a

TYPE: Auction

INTERNET ID: 300P193282

AUCTION DETAILS

11:00am, Wednesday April 15th, 2026

CONTACT DETAILS

Mike Clifton
0400 095 902

reliable 36-inch average annual rainfall, the property delivers outstanding seasonal resilience and long-term production certainty.

Rarely do opportunities of this magnitude come to market. Te Angie Station stands as a benchmark New England grazing enterprise - combining scale, proven performance and investment-grade fundamentals in one of the region's most tightly held locations.

