"Native Home" - Home Packed with Australian History

57.87 hectares, 143.00 acres

Built in 1839, Native home was originally an inn and was a coach stop heading to and from Goulburn. In 1863, Ben Hall and gang arrived at the Inn to discover that the police were inside and promptly moved on. The name Native Home arose from a colloquialism in that the settlers in that area considered themselves "native" to that area.

Today it is a beautiful family home set on 143 acres with the Georges Plains Creek meandering through the property.

This is a rare opportunity to secure a beautiful home on acreage close to the growing regional centre of Bathurst. The history within the walls of 'Native Home' is amazing. The old stone wall in the garden is all that remains of the original horse stables and the old cellar under the house is still used today. After 24 years of ownership the vendors are retiring and moving into town.
