Built in 1986, the single-level home delivers generous proportions throughout, providing versatility for large or multi-generational families. Inside, the home comprises five bedrooms and two bathrooms, including a main bedroom with a walk-in wardrobe and ensuite, and four additional bedrooms all fitted with built-in wardrobes. The main bathroom features a bathtub with an overhead shower, ideal for family functionality.

Dual living zones create flexibility: a separate east wing hosts four bedrooms and a dedicated living area - perfect for children or teenagers - while the main living space forms the heart of the home, with multiple access points leading outdoors to a shaded terrace ideal for summer relaxation and a sunny, north-facing deck overlooking the established gardens.

Beyond the home, lifestyle amenities abound. A full-size tennis court, multiple sheds, and a comprehensive water-tank system are complemented by established olive groves, enhancing the property's appeal for hobby farming, small-scale production, or self-sufficient living.

With its strategic location, generous landholding, and family-friendly layout, 390 Penna Road encapsulates the essence of Tasmanian rural living - space, tranquility, and convenience in one.
